Scout and Guide Jamboree Will Be Long Remembered

The Scout Guide Jamboree, held Monday evening in the arena at Victoria Park, Calgary, was an imposing and spectacular event, when 5000 Scouts, Guides, Brownies and Cubs from 45 outside points, conveyed by C.P.R. special trains, bus and lorries, to do honor to their Chiefs, Lord and Lady Baden-Powell.

The memory of that vast throng assembled in the arena will live long in the minds of all who witnessed it. It was one of the most impressive ceremonies Calgary and visitors have ever looked upon.

First of all, "O Canada," was sung with great vim, followed by the welcome to the Chiefs. Then in the short message Lord Baden-Powell said, "I want to say how delighted I am to be in Calgary again and to see such a tremendous gathering to meet the Chief Guide and myself," he said, "many of you have come a long distance and that tells me more than anything else that you have the right spirit—the Guide spirit." Then he gave the message from the Prince of Wales. Lady Powell then gave a short address, with an address from Princess Mary.

The Scouts and Guides then swept past the saluting band, the colors of many out-of-town troops were seen. For the next hour and a half demonstrations of Scout and Guide training occupied the arena. The Chief Scout, many times during the demonstrations, walked about among the Scouts and Guides in the arena, with a pleasant word to all for their performance.

The Blackfoot Indians, of Gleichen, all of which were bona fide Scouts and Guides, gave several Indian dances in full regalia, which brought great applause from the crowd. The last item was a Peace Pageant, which was wonderfully portrayed by floats and all the different nationalities of Scouts and Guides demonstrating world brotherhood and International Peace. A float, showing peace enthroned, headed the procession, then the National Anthem, when the Scouts and Guides knelt in reverence for the first three bars. The Chief Scout then asked for three cheers as an expression of loyalty to their King. Remarks were heard on all sides on the splendid training and so little confusion.

The Arrowwood Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies attended the Jamboree. Many of the older folk accompanied them and declare that it was a wonderful night.

SYNOPSIS

"You're fallen here to a half-share in plenty of trouble," the lawyer told Gerald Kene. "The broken Spur has been systematically looting the ranch, and old Joe Carr, your partner, is drinking himself into ruin."

Dad Kane, desert rat and luckless prospector till now, returns to find Dustin and Spike Goddard, who had gravitated him, of his discovery of a rich gold mine, and shows samples of the ore.

Dustin unexpectedly comes along while Stone and Edith are riding fence, and seeing them, stops and talks to Edith. He mentions their dispute could be settled by marrying him, and Edith refuses his proposal with remarks that make Dustin furious. He insists Stone, who promptly throws him into a pool of water.

Dustin learns that Gerald Kene has been sent for, and also that Duro Stone has seen the broken Spur men rustling Carr's cattle. He sets out with Dad Kane to learn the location of his gold discovery. Dad Kane shows Dustin the mine.

They go back to camp, and Dustin shoots Kene. He fixes the shooting on Payot Gregg, a drug addict, who, stupefied by the narcotic he had taken, did not know whether he was guilty or not. They bury Kane and then return to the Broken Spur ranch.

Meanwhile at the Hour-Glass Carr, Crewe and Stone speculate as to the meaning of entries in the notebook belonging to Dad Kane that Stone had found. Stone thinks of a possible solution, and, accompanied by Edith Carr, rides out to Red Water to test out his theory, which proves correct, and they find the rich gold deposit mentioned in the prospector's notebook. As they return to the ranch, they meet Dustin leaving the house, who, purposeful but unsuccessfully tries to ride down Stone.

Sam Dustin, the boy before Gerald Kene's arrival in Arco, cunningly suggests to Payot Gregg that Kene or Kane was a relative of the old prospector, and was seeking information as to the old mine's whereabouts. If Payot wanted to live, and prevent finding out about the murder, Gregg should shoot Kene when he arrived.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

Even Dustin grinned at the thought of the old ranch-man, once the Nestor of Seco Valley, being searched for a gun in a murder case. Gary was laughing frankly as he thrust a big hand into the side pocket of Joe Carr's coat. But that grin suddenly froze on his face as he drew from the pocket a wadded mass of green-and-yellow silk. He seized it by one dirty corner and shook it out and all the watchers started back as a short heavy Derringer pistol clattered to the floor.

Gary's eyes bulged and Crewe's face changed. Carr, grown suddenly old and grave, stared at the pistol as Gary reached for it but Stone was too quick for him. He quickly retrieved the weapon and examined it carefully and a silence fell that Dustin broke.

"I reckon this clears me of all suspicion," he snarled. "When the Hour-Glass gets to shootin' their own partners they're droppin' pretty damned low."

Gary turned sharply on him: "You're cleared, Dustin," he said. "But I'm givin' you a word of advice. Say nothin' of this here till I tell you. If any word gets out, I'll know who told it. He'll have me to reckon with. Get me?"

Dustin looked at him querry and a chilly feeling ran up his back. He did not really fear men but he had a most healthy regard for old Jim Gary.

"Good Lord," he snapped: "I'm not interested in Hour-Glass killin' off Hour-Glass. It's rat eat rat as far as I'm concerned. I'll say not a word about it."

The door slammed behind him and Gary turned to old Carr. "Listen now, Joe..." His voice had grown suddenly old and tired for he had been fond of Joe for more than a generation. "You got some explainin' to do, Joe. Where'd you get that Derringer?"

"I never had a Derringer in my life," said Carr dully. "I ain't got no now."

Gary quietly "broke" the pistol. One barrel had been fired, in the other a loaded cartridge nestled and the lower barrel was foul from the explosion. He extracted the empty shell and fitted it to the big lead bullet that Spike quietly handed him. It fitted. Spike stared at him. Then Stone took the pistol from Gary's hand and examined it. Crewe was a study. He could not disbelieve the evidence of his own eyes; yet...

He knew old Joe Carr and loved him. "I think we're barkin' at a knot, Sheriff," said Stone quietly.

Gary turned on him. "When I need a tenderfoot to tell me my business, I'll call you," he said acidly. "What you got that's new?"

"A little bit of brains," said Stone. "You can see for yourself that the man's shot on the right side... Just above the liver. Every one in this room knows that he was standin' on Mr. Carr's right. Did Carr reach clear around the man and shoot right toward him?"

Epps and Crewe both nodded and Gary looked puzzled. "Are you sure Carr was standin' as you say?" he asked.

"Absolutely certain."

"Here," said Epps quickly: "We can't wait till you solve this case before we treat the man. I want some one to help him over to my house. I'll take care of him till you can get a regular doctor."

"One minute..." Gary turned to Carr. "...Joe," he said gently: "God knows I don't like to arrest you but I've got to. The evidence is too strong against you. If you give me your word of honor not to make any break, I'll take you over to my house as a guest till we can find out what's to be done. If this man dies, it'll be a charge of murder I suppose. You say his name's Kene?"

"Yes, Gerald Kene," said Crewe. "He and Joe own the Hour-Glass together. That's the best thing to do, Jim. You take care of Joe. I'll get out to the Hour-Glass. I'm afraid I'll take some explainin' to make Edith understand."

With Logan's help they got the wounded man over to Epp's house and a woman was secured to act as a nurse and Crewe drew Stone aside. "You better stop here to-night, I reckon," he said. "What is it?" he said sharply for Stone was tugging at his pocket.

"I was goin' to say that I'd better stay in here," said Stone. "I've got a clew I want to look into. Crewe... old man Carr never shot that man."

"He drew from his pocket the green-and-yellow bandanna..." "You can't tell one Derringer from another," he said. "But wearing apparel is different. Did you ever know any man wear a damnable thing like this? It's got three bullet-holes in it so there's no doubt about what took place. The would-be murderer had the gun wrapped in this and he fired through it. That's why we didn't see any sparks. Did you ever see any one wearing a thing like this?"

Crewe shook his head. Things were moving too fast for him.

"I never did," he said. "Well... I just got to get back to the Hour-Glass. Look out for young Kene and old Joe, will you, Stone?"

Stone promised and Crewe started the car down the street. The moment darkness hid the car, Stone hunted up Epps and asked by force dragged him into his office.

Neither man ever told what took place in that office but in a half-hour Stone emerged triumphant and headed down the street for the little office where James Kane held forth. That gentleman, bending over a form-case, was snatched to a stool and an evil-smelling mass of green-and-yellow silk was thrust under his nose.

"What's that smell like?" demanded Stone sharply.

James, who had been writing a hasty account of the shooting, sniffed and spat.

"Payot," he said. "Why?" "That's what struck me," said Stone. "Can you possibly be mistaken?"

"Good Lord, no. It's payot all right. Where'd you get it?" "Ever see any one wearing a thing like that?"

"I never did..." Look here, Stone... what're you driving at?" Stone told him in well-chosen words and few and James took fire at the remark.

"It looks to me as though you've got a solid reason to chew on," he said finally. "I only know one man who can be said to regularly use that infernal stuff. That's the man Payot killed at the Broken Spur. I'll

When Is Middle Age?

English Judge Thinks It Might Be Around Sixty

What is middle age? The question was asked by Lord Howarth, the Lord Chief Justice, at the Sunset Assizes when the counsel in a case before the court referred to a certain man as "middle-aged."

"Can you tell me what is middle age?" His Lordship asked. "In it is always a little further on than the man who is speaking has got to." He asked the age of the man in question.

"Forty-one," replied counsel. "A mere child," retorted the Lord Chief Justice, who himself is 65. "Don't call him middle-aged for another 20 years."

CHAPTER XVI.

Sam Dustin headed for the Broken Spur half drunk with liquor and succors. Even in his best hopeful moments he could never have hoped that Payot Gregg, having killed Gerald Kene, would place the blame for that killing on Joe Carr. Joe, of all men!

The only man who could have had a motive," he chuckled. "If Kene dies, Carr gets his half of the Hour-Glass. I'll take it away from Carr and have the ranch and the mine too."

And the girl... "Wait!" A sudden illuminating thought came to him and he slapped his leg hard. "By God," he said. "I've got it and I've got the girl... But it's pretty hard on Payot. First of all I've got to find out if the man Kene will be there."

He hung out of the car and almost leaped into the house. Spike Goddard was flung aside roughly as Dustin jerked the telephone from its hook.

"What're you callin' Doc Epps for?" demanded Spike.

Dustin waved him into silence and Epps came into the office across the house. Goddard could hear it plainly.

"Oh, Dustin at the Broken Spur. Huh? Yes... This is Doctor Epps. What?" "Oh... I got you... Yeah... I know who you mean. I brought him over to my house..." Gerald Kene, of course.

The partner of old man Carr at the Hour-Glass... "You are interested, huh? Well, I'll tell you, Dustin. He died ten minutes ago."

Epps' voice sounded strained and uncertain but there was no mistaking the words. "The coroner'll be in to-morrow. It looks like a hemp necktie for old man Carr."

Spike Goddard heard it all and stood staring at his partner as he hung up the receiver.

"What the hell has happened, Sam?" he demanded.

He considered Dustin in silence while Dustin told him all that had occurred. Finally:

"Look out you don't trip," he said curtly. "There was a man once who had all thirteen trumps but lost the game..."

"How could that be, you poor fool?" demanded Dustin.

For answer Spike grinned at him. "It was old-fashioned Whist," he said. "One man held all thirteen trumps. It was his partner's loss. He let an ace and when his partner trumped it he got mad and shot him. The jury said it was justifiable homicide..."

"You fool..." Dustin grabbed him by the arm. "Don't you see it yet? Payot Gregg shot this man Kene and planted the pistol on old Joe Carr..."

"Joe, who inherits the Hour-glass by the death of Kene. We've got Carr's note and we alone know of old Kane's mine..."

"Nobody knows Payot killed him," said Spike.

"I do. Old man Carr'll be held for the murder. He'll hang unless they find out about Payot. Don't you reckon Edith Carr'll marry me to get her father clear?"

that the question that most have arisen in the minds of those present as they looked down on the massed thousands of young people. "What is there for these youngsters to look forward to under the system at present prevailing." Ask yourselves that same question.

Passengers Located Close to Center of Car

Three major engineering principles combine to give to the new Ford V-8 for 1935 what Ford engineers term
the "centre-poise" ride, according to Larsen Implements, local Ford dealers.

These principles are: Correct spring suspension, involving equality of front and rear spring flexibility.

Proper car weight balance and passenger weight distribution.
Location of passengers close to centre of the car.
Utilization of these in combination as practiced by Ford engineers, achieves for the new Ford V-8 remarkable improvement in riding comfort without sacrifice of either safety or stability.
